

Nuestra Palabra's 6th Annual Edward James Olmos Houston Latin Book & Family Festival was postponed due to hurricane Ike.

However, Nuestra Palabra did not want to let Hispanic Heritage pass without bringing an amazing Latina Writer to Houston.

Ana Castillo is a celebrated poet, novelist, short story writer, and essayist. Castillo was born and raised in Chicago. Long considered one of the leading voices to emerge from the Chicana experience, Castillo is a prolific author whose work has been critically acclaimed and widely anthologized in the United States and abroad. Ilan Stavans writes "She is the most daring and expericental of Latino novelists." Castillo's books include the novel, The Mixquiahuala Letters (Bilingual Review Press, 1986; Doubleday, 1992), for which she received the Before Columbia Foundation's American Book Award in 1987. Sapogonia (Bilingual Review Press, 1990), is a complex and engaging novel and a literary triumph, according to the renowned Chicano novelist Rudolfo Anaya who calls Castillo "one of our finest Chicana novelists." Her latest book is The Guardians published by Random House.
